A rather strange incident occurred in Goetz Bachert's back yard, on Pearl street, a few days ago. The yard at long. Their bodies were covered with times appears to be the meeting place for rodents and on the day in question a steel trap, baited with stale cheese, was set for their reception. Several persons were watching the trap when a large rat put in an appearance and walked toward the trap. He was within a few feet of it when Mr. Bachert's favorite cat clambered over the fence into the yard. The rat stopped. So did the cat. They seemed to recognize each other. After looking at one another a moment the distance between them was lessened, Finally they were nose to nose and actually kissed each other. They remained together a few minutes, when the rat took a knowing glance at the trap and ran away in the opposite direction. The cat and the rat were evidently old friends and the house pet probably notifiel the house pest of the dangerous trap. -[Norwich Bulletin.

From McMaster's History of the People of the It is pleasing to reflect that, while our countrymen have been making such astonishing progress in all that administers to the comforts and conveniences of life, they have at the same time grown charitable and humane. There is, indeed, scarcely a scrap of information bearing upon the subject which does not go to prove beyond a question that the generation which witne sed the Revolution was less merciful and tender-hearted than the ceneration which witnessed the civil war. Our ancestors, it is true, put up a just cry of horror at the brutal treatment of last," said the grocery man to the laid ships and hulks. So great was their in h. . caps to countrymen in the prison with representations of the attrocities of which they complained, that their desocialants to the remotest generation might hold in remembrance the cruelty of the British and the suffering of the patriots. Yet even then the face of the land was dotted with prisons where deeds of cruelty were done, in comparison with which the fonlest acts committed in the hulks sink to a contemptible insighifiweek. Say, did I tell you about pa and the pence there was in Connecticut an underground prison, which surpassed in horrors the Black Hole in Calcutta. This den, known as the Newgate Prison, mize, all she can, and pa has been getting was an old worked out copper mine, in the hills near Granby. The only entrance shaft, which led to the caverns under ground. There, in little pens of wood, Pa wanted a new suit of clothes, and ma from thirty to one hundred calorits were immured; their feet made fast to iron bars, and their necks chained to beamin the roof. The darkness was intense; the caves recked with filth; vermin abounded; water trickled from the roof and oozed from the sides of the caverns buge masses of earth were continually the angle worms to ma, and ma had to falling off. In the dampness and filth explain that she made over one of my the clothing of the prisoners grew mouldy old suits for pa. He was mad and took and rotted away, and their limbs became stiff with rheumatism. This prison was window, and swore he would never perhaps the worst in the country, yet in humiliate himself by wearing his son's every county were jaths such as now old clothes. Ma tried to reason with would be thought unfit places for the him, but he was awful worked up, and vilest and most loathsome of beasts. At Northampton the cells were scarce four with it gladly. Many of the inmates of the prisons passed years without so much as washing themselves. Their hair grew stench. Their clothing rotted from their the death rate often atood as high as 60 hard enough to bear, others were added to the half-maddened prisoners. No a cell than a rush was made for him by the inmates, who stripped him of his peculiar jargon of the place was known as drink-mony. It sometimes happened that the prisoners were in possession of a carefully preserved blanket. Then this ceremony called garnishing was passed over for the yet more brutal one of blanketing. In spite of prayers and entreaties, the stranger was bound, thrown into the blanket, and tossed till he was half dead and ready to give his terment-
